“ Charlie was volunteer coordinator at WTGN when I became an overnight volunteer in 1986 or so. He was a fun guy to work with and I appreciate his ministry. One April Fools' Day, Charlie loaded an audio clip of crashing glass onto the front end of the morning weather and told me to make sure Scott Young, the morning program director, did not take the station off the air when it began to play. Scott may not have thought it was funny, but I know Charlie and I did. I will always appreciate Charlie and the things he taught me.
