“ Mom, You suffered way too much and it was more than my heart could bear. You didn't deserve this shell that you were locked in for the last 2 years. I hated seeing you the way you were, and for some reason you didn't give up.. But on the morning of Nov. 17th, you let go and let God. I told you the evening before that I am who I am because of you. I care about people regardless of their beliefs or the color of their skin. You taught me, not by your words but by your actions, and I so admire and respect you for this silent teaching that you gave me. I love you more than anything mom and hope that you are at peace now with the Lord, and you are whole again, walking with dad and lil Jim.
